Abstract

The traditional ways of thinking are often seen as obsolete and abandoned by the young generations. The youth' ideas about sexuality and family are very different nowadays, and the generation gap keeps getting larger and larger. We used a questionnaire regarding social stereotypes and one concerning actual attitudes in Romania toward women' emancipation. We found some very interesting results about the way youth think about sexuality, family, ideal wife or husband and job value. In our opinion, the sexual revolution has long begun in Romania, clearly seen in the activity of the young intellectual women and the men' adoption of feminine roles.
